REGISTERING A BUSINESS MODEL BY USING INTEREST SCHEMES TO DO BUSINESS

By
Dr. Cheah Foo Seong, FCIS, FIPA, MBA, LLM, LLD

Introduction

The Interest Schemes Act 2016 was enacted to support the Companies Act 2016 in providing another business model for doing businesses for a Small and Medium Enterprises (SME). In this type of business structure, the investor buys a portion of the business not called "share" but known as "an interest holder of the scheme".

In view of the wide reach and huge potential of interest as a basis of any innovative business scheme which is open for exploitation by irresponsible quarters to cause public to contribute money in unregulated environment, the provisions under Division 5 Part IV of the now repealed Companies Act 1965 have been revised, enhanced and regenerated in the form of Interest Schemes Act 2016.

The Interest Schemes Act 2016 (Act 778) was gazetted on 15 September 2016 and came into force on 31 January 2017. The Interest Schemes Act 2016 framework provides for a complete and comprehensive legal framework for interest schemes in Malaysia. Interest Scheme involves the pooling of a financial contribution from the public in exchange for an interest in a particular scheme.

Characteristics

The schemes mentioned in the Act is explained in the following manner:

There are three types of schemes provided by the Act, namely:-

(a) An investment scheme;
(b) Recreational membership scheme;
(c) Time-sharing scheme; or
(d) A combination of such schemes.

(a) A scheme is an investment scheme if the interest holder does not have day-to-day control over the operation of the scheme, whether or not the interest holder has the right to be consulted or to give direction and that—

(i) the interest holder contributes money or money's worth as a consideration to acquire a right or interest to profits, assets or realisation of any financial or business undertaking of the scheme, whether the right or interest are actual, prospective or contingent and are enforceable or not; or

(ii) the contribution by the interest holder is pooled or used in common enterprise, to produce financial benefits, or benefits consisting of rights or interests in property for which the interest holder is led to expect profits, rent or interest from the efforts of the promoter of the enterprise or a third party.

(b) A scheme is a recreational membership scheme if—

(i) in substance and irrespective of the form, the scheme involves the investment of money in or under such circumstances that an interest holder acquires or may acquire an interest or right in respect of property which under or in accordance with the terms of investment will or may, at the option of the investor, be used or employed in common with any other interest or right in respect of property acquired in or under like circumstances and includes an entitlement to a right to use or enjoy any sport, recreational, holiday or other related facilities for a consideration; and

(ii) the scheme is to operate for a duration of not less than twelve months whether or not on a recurring basis.

(c) A scheme is a time-sharing scheme if—

(i) an interest holder is or may become entitled to use, occupy or possess for two or more periods during the period for which the scheme, whether in Malaysia or elsewhere is to operate, property to which the scheme relates; and

(ii) the scheme is to operate for a period of not less than three years.

(d) A scheme referred to in any one of the above mentioned may be in the form of a Shariah compliant scheme.

A scheme may be registered as a premium scheme, a small scheme or a foreign scheme.

An application for the registration of a premium scheme may be made by a management company provided that the management company—

1 Section 2 of ISA 2016 defines a "management company", in relation to any interests issued or proposed to be issued or any deed that relates to any interests issued or proposed to be issued, means a company incorporated under the Companies Act 2016 or corresponding previous written law by or on behalf of which the interests have been or are proposed to be issued

In considering the application made, the Registrar may direct the management company to furnish other document or further information or clarification.

In relation to an application made under this section, the Registrar may—

(a) require the management company to appear before the Registrar for personal representation;

(b) direct the management company to compensate any person who have purchased any interest in the scheme prior to the application; or

The registrar has the power to stop the trustee from operating a trust account or appointing a new person to administer it in certain circumstances.

Certificate of authorization

Upon approval of the application, the Registrar shall enter the particulars of the scheme in the register and—

(a) issue a certificate of authorization; and
(b) allocate an authorization number, to the management company in respect of the scheme.

In issuing a certificate of authorization, the Registrar shall have the power to impose any terms and conditions as he thinks fit.

The certificate of authorization issued under this section shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Interest Schemes Act 2016 in respect of registration have been complied with and that the scheme is registered under the Act.

Some examples of Interest Schemes in operation

In Malaysia, managed investment schemes cover a wide variety of arrangements and underlying assets. Some examples of managed investment schemes include:

- computer renting and leasing,
- swiftlet farming and arowana breeding,
- property and palm oil.
- horse-breeding and horse racing schemes;
- time-sharing schemes;
- golf clubs and recreational membership scheme

Conclusion

Interest scheme involves the pooling of a financial contribution from the public in exchange for an interest in a particular scheme. While the traditional means of business involve exchanging money with outright ownership of property or rights, by virtue of being dynamic, business continues to evolve. Thus, business creativity has created new classes of assets and this include "interest", which connotes that a right obtained by the purchasing public may be temporary, fractional or not outright. There can be many forms of interest and only limited by the boundary of creative business minds.

For the public genuinely intending to diversify their investment portfolios to meet their unique investment goals, interest scheme offers another option to the investing public by participating in a different asset class investment platform subject to careful consideration of the potential benefits against the risks involved.

For companies especially the Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs), depending on their business strategies, interest scheme offers them an alternative method of funding their business growth beyond the traditional financing options.

RESIGNATION OF COMPANY SECRETARY - TIPPING POINTS AND PROCEDURAL COMPLIANCE

By Choong Hui Yan
B.Acc(Hons)(Malaya), ACCA (UK), Licensed Secretary

Introduction

Company secretary is a noble profession with crucial, irreplaceable roles for each company, innately due to the Companies Act 2016 ("the Act"). The key duties of company secretary are to:-

(i) act as an official liaison between Companies Commission of Malaysia (SSM) and company;

(ii) coordinate various administrative and compliance filings under the Act;

(iii) advise board of directors on duties and responsibilities prescribed by the Act;

(iv) remind members on rights and responsibilities as per the Act; and

(v) act impartially in resolving conflicts between shareholders and/ or directors.

The office of secretary for each company shall not be left vacant for more than 30 days in pursuant to section 240.

Appointment

In general, company secretary is appointed even before company incorporation to advise and assist in name search and reservation, pre-incorporation resolutions, declaration of promoters and directors, and then the company registration. Such appointment is always on contractual basis, affirmed by the law case of Goh Kim Ewe & Anor Cheng Ah Ching & Ors [2016] MLJU 940, where the High Court held that the relationship between company secretary and company is only contractually established, and the company secretary will never owe fiduciary duties towards the company or directors.

The appointment will be made official via the notification of section 58 and 236(2) to SSM in relation to appointment of the first company secretary. When the company is incorporated by promoters, a company secretary must be appointed within 30 days from the company incorporation [s 236(2)].

An effective appointment requires contractual terms offered by company and an acceptance from the company secretary via written consent. When no specific timeframe prescribed for tenure, such tenure of appointment is always perpetual until the company initiates termination or resignation by the company secretary. There may be circumstances where such appointment is with specific tenure, expressly stated in the company constitution or contractual terms.

Termination

With the appointment by the company, the company secretary is an 'officer' of the company with name documented in the register of directors, managers and secretaries [s 57]. The freedom of contract and flexibility to exit from the company is governed and enshrined under the sections 237 and 239 of the Act.

Termination initiated by company can be made by section 239 where board of directors can remove a company secretary via circular written resolutions, subject to company constitution or contractual terms. Such changes then need to notify SSM through notification of section 58 in relation to change in the register of directors, managers and secretaries. Notification of section 58 can be served by either outgoing or incoming company secretary (new).

If it is to be served by incoming company secretary (new), reassignment of company secretary must be served and approved by SSM before notification of section 58.

Resignation by company secretary on the other hand, may not at all time can notify SSM via notification of section 58. Company secretary may resign due to the following:-

(a) end of tenure as per company constitution or contractual terms [s 237(1)];

(b) board of directors unable to be contacted after various attempts [s 237(2)];

(c) breach of contractual terms by the company, particularly non-payment of secretarial fees or company taking no action in meeting claims made by company secretary;

(d) change of board of directors or dispute between directors or shareholders which then causes the company secretary unable to discharge duties or obligations; or

(e) ethical standards being compromised or professionalism being severely impacted giving no other alternative but to resign from office.

When specific timeframe is set in company constitution or contract for the terms of appointment, the company secretary may resign by serving resignation notice to board of directors upon expiry of tenure [s 237(1)]. If there is incoming company secretary (new), such resignation can be notified to SSM via notification of section 58. It is however if the resigning company secretary is uncertain on whether there is incoming company secretary (new), such resignation has to notify SSM by lodging a copy of the notice served to the board of directors, accompanied by a declaration of section 237(3)(a). The resigning secretary will officially cease office on the expiry of tenure specified in company constitution or contractual terms, or expiry of 30 days after the date of notice served to the board of directors under subsection 237(1).

When none of the board of directors can be communicated after various attempts even at last known residential addresses, the company secretary may resign from office under subsection 237(2). Such resignation will have no chance to notify SSM via notification of section 58, but notice of section 237(2) in relation to intention to vacate the office of secretary. Such notice of section 237(2) has to be lodged together with proofs that none of the board of directors can be communicated. The most valid proof is returned notices served to last known addresses of the board of directors through courier services. The resigning secretary will officially cease office on the expiry of 30 days after the date of notice section 237(2) served to SSM.

In the absence of lodgement of notification of section 58 to SSM in relation to change in the register of directors, managers and secretaries, the company secretary's name will remain in the register of SSM and reflected in corporate profile available at MyData. The resigning company secretary must at all times keep the notification of section 237(1) together with declaration of section 237(3)(a), or notification of section 237(2) served to SSM as proof of discharged. These notifications are publicly available at MyData but subject to fees.

Conclusion

Company secretary is now licensed with practicing certificate [s 241] and subject to strict compliance requirement under the Act. Thus, the resignation procedures and effects must be well understood to manage claims from non-performing company, or to avoid unnecessary compounds from SSM arisen from the non-performing company.

Company secretary must act promptly to resign from the company if any of (a) to (e) takes place, especially if ethical standards or professionalism being compromised.

WHY A TAILORED CONSTITUTION IS IMPORTANT FOR YOUR COMPANY

By Shawn Ho and Tiffany Chin
Messrs. Donovan & Ho

A Company Constitution ("constitution") is vital for a company, no matter big or small, because the default rules found in the Companies Act 2016 ("CA 2016") will automatically apply without a constitution. "Replaceable Rules" are the provisions provided in CA 2016 that may be incorporated into a constitution. These rules are customisable and modifiable depending on what suits the company best.

There are currently 62 identifiable replaceable rules that can be divided into "presumptive provisions" and "optional provisions". However, these replaceable rules are scattered across the CA 2016, making it potentially difficult to locate.

Presumptive provisions & Optional provisions

Presumptive provisions do not require an active opt-in on the part of the company. Meaning, these clauses will operate by default in accordance with the CA 2016 and can be amended. Presumptive provisions commonly employ phrases like "unless otherwise stated in the constitution" or "subject to the constitution" to indicate that the provision shall apply by default, unless the constitution provides otherwise.

Optional provisions, on the other hand, will apply only if the company chooses to expressly adopt them in the constitution. Companies that seek to incorporate these provisions must explicitly state them in the constitution, as the CA 2016 does not recognise them by default. By illustration, a constitution may dictate a fixed duration in which the company may be wound up voluntarily, in accordance with section 465 CA 2016.

What happens if your company does not have a Constitution?

Without a constitution, the relevant provisions of the CA 2016 will act as the default constitution for all companies pursuant to section 31(3) CA 2016. In the context of replaceable rules, not adopting a constitution means that companies will miss the boat on adapting a tailored constitution most suitable for their nature of business. As the internal management and governance of each company comes with its own nuances and shareholder dynamics, it is hardly realistic to suggest that the CA 2016 provides a one-size-fits-all solution to all possible scenarios that may arise from the management and governance of the company.

This may lead to some hiccups as elaborated below:

1. It makes it harder to interpret the rules governing the company. These rules are significantly more difficult to locate because the CA 2016 is extremely lengthy and contains a lot more provisions. These rules are scattered throughout the CA 2016 making it difficult to locate them for different situations. With a written constitution, it's far easier to locate the rules for the different situations or scenarios which a company may from time to time face.
2. There are times when the founders of the company find that the default rules in the CA 2016 are inappropriate for their company, or worse, may even have unintended adverse consequences on the company. By the time an issue has arisen, it may be too late as a dispute or an ongoing lawsuit could have commenced between the shareholders. Having a customized constitution would help to avoid this.

Some examples of default rules that founders may wish to modify are illustrated as follows:

Quorum

The CA 2016 provides for Board Proceedings by default in the Third Schedule. Some founders may find the provisions not appropriate for their administration and may wish to customize the default provisions. One example may be the quorum at directors' meetings, where founders may want to customize the constitution such that a particular class of director or directors (representing certain shareholders) must be present in order for the quorum to be met.

Pre-emptive rights

The CA 2016 also applies its own default rules for pre-emptive rights. This means shares must first be issued to shareholders on a pro-rata basis to maintain the existing shareholding proportions, after which the directors can dispose of the unsubscribed shares in their discretion.

In this situation, some founders/shareholders may want to ensure that the shares are offered to them or specific individuals first (rather than on a pro-rata basis), before being offered or disposed of by the directors. (section 85 of CA 2016).

Variation of Rights

Section 91(5) of CA 2016 also deems further issuance of preference shares as a "variation of rights". This means that the approval from the existing class of preference shareholders must be obtained before a new issuance of preference shares, and also allows a certain percentage of the preference shareholders to go to Court to invalidate the new issuance of preference shares. Founders who need to raise capital in subsequent rounds may face some difficulty in this scenario.

Power of Interested Directors to Vote

The default rule under section 222 of CA 2016 does not bar directors of private companies (except for private companies which are subsidiaries of public companies) from voting in transactions and agreements where they are personally interested in as long as their interest has been declared. Some founders/shareholders may be uncomfortable with this and want to incorporate stricter provisions in the constitution to exclude them from voting in such matters.

The Board's Right to Approve Directors' Fees

The default rule under section 230 of CA 2016 allows the Board to approve directors' fees in private companies (except for private companies which are subsidiaries of public companies). Shareholders or founders may be uncomfortable with this arrangement and may want to ensure that this approval is done by shareholders.

What if your company has an existing Memorandum and Articles of Association ("M&A") which was drafted before CA 2016 was in force?

Potential conflicts between Memorandum and Articles of Association ("M&A") and CA 2016 could lead to disputes between shareholders and lawsuits due to the inconsistencies.

In the Fourth Schedule of the Companies Act 1965 ("Old Act"), we can find a table comprising of internal management rules ("Table A"). The regulations in Table A are a good reference for specimen clauses, available for companies to cherry-pick to include in their M&A. While some of these Table A clauses have already been incorporated into the CA 2016 itself, several provisions have been amended and the CA 2016 requires companies to update some of these provisions. Hence, companies should review their Articles of Association and decide the next step forward to reduce the possibility of disputes between members of the company.

What should your company do now?

1. Companies limited by shares incorporated prior to 2016
    - These companies were statutorily required to adopt a M&A prior to 2016. Companies may amend and update the Table A provisions in their M&A to be aligned with the CA 2016; or
    - Revoke the M&A and operate without a constitution. This would mean that all the default rules of the CA 2016 would apply with no tailoring or modifications made to suit the management and governance of the company. The founders/shareholders may not be aware of the implications of such default rules and this may lead to a difficult situation or a conflict later when it is discovered; or
    - Revoke the M&A and adopt a new constitution in line with the CA 2016. This is probably the best and cleanest option.
2. Newer companies incorporated after the enactment of the CA 2016
    - The most strategic choice is to have a constitution tailored to their needs; or
    - Companies may also choose to operate without a constitution. This would mean that all the default rules of the CA 2016 would apply with no tailoring or modifications made to suit the management and governance of the company. The founders/shareholders may not be aware of the implications of such default rules and this may lead to a difficult situation or a conflict later when it is discovered.

In a nutshell

The Constitution of a company is an extremely important document. It provides the structure for the management and governance of the company. Although the CA 2016 has default rules applicable where the company has no Constitution, it would be risky to just rely on the default rules without considering the implications of the default rules on their specific company. The ability to tailor the Constitution of a company is an important consideration for founders, investors and shareholders. It provides the flexibility to adopt a Constitution which they feel is optimal for their specific company. It is submitted that founders and shareholders should take advantage of this flexibility and have a tailored Constitution which provides the best framework for the management and governance of their company.

CORPORATE RESCUE MECHANISMS IN MALAYSIA: PART 2 - WHAT IS A JUDICIAL MANAGEMENT ORDER?

By Sean Tan Yang Wei (Principal Associate)
& Valerie Seaw Ja Hui (Pupil), Messrs. Thomas Philip

See Part 1 of our series for an introduction to what a Judicial Management Order entails.

A Judicial Management Order ("JMO") must be obtained from Court and in order to do so, there are several factors and requirements which need to be met in order to be successful in the application. This article will focus on the factors considered by the Court when evaluating a JMO application.

Is the Company Precluded from Applying for a JMO?

First and foremost, one must ascertain whether the target company of a JMO is eligible to be placed under judicial management. The Companies Act 2016 ("CA 2016") prohibits certain types of companies from being placed under judicial management, namely:

a. A company which is a licenced institution, or an operator of a designated payment system regulated under the laws enforced by the Central Bank of Malaysia [s 403(a) CA 2016];

b. A company subject to the Capital Markets and Services Act 2007 [s 403(b) CA 2016]; and

c. A company already in liquidation [s 405(6) CA 2016].

Such companies are not allowed to be placed under judicial management and any application would be dismissed by the Court. The recent High Court decision of Re Scomi Group Bhd [2022] 7 MLJ 620 held that s 403(b) CA 2016 applies to all companies whose shares are quoted on a stock market of a stock exchange. However, this provision may be subject to an amendment in the near future [1].

The Secured Creditor's Veto

It should also be noted that secured creditors who are entitled to appoint receivers or receivers and managers over the whole or part of the company's assets (usually debenture holders) have the power to veto or scupper any application for judicial management. This is provided for under s 409 (read together with s 408(1)(b)(ii) CA 2016) which states that the Court shall dismiss a JMO application if the same is opposed by a debenture holder[2].

Unsecured creditors on the other hand enjoy no such veto power. They are however entitled to intervene[3] and raise their opposition at such proceedings for the consideration of the Court.

Who Can File the Application for a JMO?

Under the CA 2016, an application for a JMO can be filed by the following parties:

a. members or shareholder of the company in the name of company;

b. directors of the company; or

c. a creditor or several creditors of the company (including contingent and prospective creditors).

Contingent Creditor – a creditor to whom a debt may be owed to by the company upon the occurrence of an event

Prospective Creditor – a creditor whose debt has been proven but is not immediately payable

While all parties above are allowed to file an application for a JMO, it ought to be noted that there are slightly different requirements that must be met by each type of applicant. For instance, resolutions would have to be passed before shareholders or the directors of the company file an application for a JMO. A creditor's application on the other hand does not require majority support from the creditors of the company.

Other than the different requirements, an applicant should be mindful of the quality and quantity of supporting evidence expected from them. For instance, higher quality and/or more evidence would be expected when the applicant is the company itself, than if it were a creditor whose access to information would be comparatively limited (Re Biaxis (M) Sdn Bhd [2022] 7 MLJ 443).

Factors Considered When Allowing or Disallowing an Application for a JMO

If the preconditions above are satisfied, the Court would consider the tests set out under s 405 of the CA 2016. s 405(1) CA 2016, which sets out 2 main limbs, namely:

(a) the Court is satisfied that the company is or will be unable to pay its debts ("1st Limb"); and

(b) the Court considers that the making of the order would be likely to achieve one or more of the following purposes:

1. the survival of the company, or the whole or part of its undertaking as a going concern;
2. the approval under s 366 of a compromise or arrangement between the company and any such persons as are mentioned in that section;
3. a more advantageous realisation of the company's assets would be effected that on a winding up.

("2nd Limb")

1st Limb: "Is or will be unable to pay its debt"

The First Limb revolves around the company's ability to service its debts. The party who is seeking a JMO must provide cogent evidence that can satisfactorily prove that the company is or will be unable to pay its debts.

The Court will not only assess the overall liabilities of the company against its assets but will also consider whether the company has enough cash in hand to pay its debts as and when they become due. If a company is unable to pay its creditors (or debt) on time, the Court will presume that the company is unable to pay its debts and is therefore considered commercially insolvent. This test is also widely known as the "commercial or cash flow insolvency test".

2nd Limb: the Statutory Purposes

If the Court is satisfied that the company in question is or will be unable to pay its debts, the Court will then move to consider whether the making of a JMO would achieve one or more of the purposes set out under Section 405(1)(b) of the Companies Act 2016, namely:

a. The survival of the company, or the whole or part of its undertaking as a going concern.
b. The approval under s 366 of a compromise or arrangement between the company and any such persons as are mentioned in that section; or
c. A more advantageous realisation of the company's assets would be effected than on a winding up.

Here, the Court will examine the evidence presented to determine if there is a real prospect that the one or more of the stated purposes is achievable if an order for JM is made. Mere assertions that the purposes of the JM could be met, such as the likelihood of financing or rehabilitation, without the same being backed by proper evidence would be insufficient[4].

The Court of Appeal in CIMB Islamic Bank Bhd v Wellcom Communications (NS) Sdn Bhd & Anor [2019] 4 CLJ 1 also stated that, "the court's consideration at all stages, that is to say from the date the application is filed and from the date of the order, if any is given, must be based on strict proof and evidence and not merely surmise and conjecture".

The Courts have also held that the filing of an affidavit of the judicial manager candidate, while not mandatory, would be useful to support such applications as the Court would be better equipped to assess and examine the viability of the proposal to rescue the company or to achieve the statutory purposes[5].

Conclusion

It is necessary to understand the requirements of a JMO application to better understand and evaluate the prospects of success. However, the law governing the judicial management mechanism in Malaysia is still developing and is expected to receive further amendments from Parliament in the near future.

Stay tuned for the next part of this series where we will delve into the effects of a JMO on the company in question.
